This application adds a new value, based on the combination of the image recognition algorithm, the electronic score and the relationship between the image and the score. The score, the number of notes and a performance duration are given. The score is given in digital form. The X2 system recognizes the notes of the musical score. The first detection of notes is done during the process band. The function automatically detects the number of notes, and not only for the process band but also for choruses and for the complete score. For each score, the X2 system does not display only the note detection and the performance duration but also the reading and notation of the music note. Thus, the X2 system displays the musical notation and the system of numeration. The X2 system also displays the hierarchy of the notes, including the bass clef, treble clef, and staff. The X2 system can extract the writing of chords, arpeggios and fingerings. It also provides the notation of the staff, the treble clef, the bass clef and the harmony symbols, or other special signs as for special meters or articulations. The X2 system also provides the instrument name. The X2 Pro, provided with the price option, adds a function of electronic instrument by means of a software upgrade. This option includes the extraction of the musician's name and the score of the notes. The software upgrade also includes the extraction of notes from sheet music, a facility for enhancing the music notation and providing the notation of the staff, treble clef, bass clef and the instrument used. The identification of the instrument is based on the color palette of the color palette of the image and the lines and notes that are notated. The X2 Pro software upgrade provides automatic recognition of the notes and timing, a facility for enhancing the music notation, and a facility for calculating and annotating a performance duration. The user has the facility to annotate the performance duration in the image and to extract the duration and note notes. The Notation X2 Pro software upgrade provides automatic recognition of the notes and timing, a facility for enhancing the music notation, and a facility for annotating a performance duration.
